

John Brooks Slaughter
has joined USC
as Professor of Education and Engineering

Olin Hall 500
Los Angeles CA 90089-1451
<http://viterbi.usc.edu>

USC Viterbi

School of Engineering

John Brooks Slaughter was the first African American to direct the National Science Foundation. A distinguished electrical engineer who is a member of the National Academy of Engineering, he has led two major universities and has a lifelong personal passion for increasing education diversity in science, technology, engineering and mathematics. Now he joins the University of Southern California with dual appointments in the Rossier School of Education and the Viterbi School of Engineering.

Non-Profit Organization
Postage PAID
University of Southern California